1. Research

YOU

(Your Service, Goods, Songs, Skills)

- Your value
What is the particular asset you bring to an employer?
- Salary range and bottom line
Use resources like salary.com to find an average range for the job in your city. Also create a budget to determine when a job offer works for your overall goals.

THE EMPLOYER

(Band Leader, Artist, Company, Institution)

- Potential needs and goals
How can you improve their business and help them meet their goals?
- Current and past staff
Use linkedin.com and other social media to find connections (friends/coworkers/alumni) to learn about past job offers and experiences as well as potential professional growth.
- Potential for market growth
Read trade magazines and industry websites.
- Competitors
Who are they and what do they offer?

DO

- Show the potential employer how you will meet their needs

DON'T

- Be the first to mention money
- Give without getting - Make the negotiation beneficial for both sides and only concede terms when the employer is willing to meet your request

2. Communicate

THE PITCH

Explain to the employer why you are worth the added investment beyond their offer. Is it your:

- Experience/Accomplishments
- Customization - personalize your service/good for each opportunity/employer
- Flexibility - adjust easily to employer's needs in a given situation and timeframe
- Added Value - provide an enhancement beyond the job expectation/description

TIMING

- At the right time
Schedule a meeting that works for the employer
- Don't rush
How will this job work with your schedule and goals?
- Don't be afraid to walk away
At what point will this offer not work? Any potential conflicts with short or long term goals?

LISTEN

Stop talking, ask questions, and focus on the employer's:

- needs
- budget
- past experiences with their previous employees - learn from their mistakes

3. Achieve

THE OFFER

- Ask for it politely in writing
- Consider all benefits beyond salary (health insurance, retirement, life insurance, exposure, connections, experience)
- For a low offer, ask for the possibility of a performance review for additional compensation

IF YOU ACCEPT THE OFFER

Ask employer for:

- resources they currently use to get up to speed quickly (office manual, software, company website/links)
 - potential obstacles (travel/commute, audience/management expectations)
- Plan for repeat business:
- Provide the service as promised
 - Follow up post-job for evaluation and potential testimonial

IF YOU DON'T ACCEPT THE OFFER

- Suggest a friend or colleague that may be an appropriate referral for the opportunity
- Thank them for their time and consideration verbally and with a letter

1. Research

YOU

(Your Goals, Costs, Value)

- Your financial goals
How much do you want to take home per year?
- Your monthly overhead
What are the costs of operating your business (rent, utilities, supplies, etc.)
- The value of your product, service, and time
Know benchmark rates for your product or the salary range for your service. Check sites like salary.com and talk to other freelancers in your industry.

MARKET

- Demand
What is the demand for your product or service? If demand is low, it makes sense to set your price lower.
- Inflation rate
If you maintain your prices despite inflation rates, you will erode your profit margin
- Client
Determine the size and scope of the company to better understand the value of your service to the particular client.

APPROACH

- Hourly or Project?
Will you set your service rate by the hour or by the project?
- Project costs
If you will charge by project, determine the costs of any supplies, travel, studio time or other expenses specific to the project.

2. Calculate

PRODUCT

- Set a realistic price based on your goals, costs, competitors' prices, the value of your time, and inflation
- A successful pricing strategy results in the most dollars after all your costs are met.
- Price low but smart—low price makes sense for a start-up, but may indicate low quality or make it harder to raise prices later
- Use discounts with care—good for encouraging repeat/bulk orders, bundling sales, rewarding early payment, or clearing out old merchandise.

SERVICE

- Yearly billable hours = hours per week x 48 weeks (accounting for holiday/sick/vacation days). Subtract around 20% to allow time to find new clients, deal with business tasks, etc.
- Hourly rate = operating costs (desired salary + yearly overhead) divided by yearly billable hours
- Profit margin—add 10-30% to your salary based on talent, expertise, experience, and size of client (more for larger company)
- Taxes—add 15% to your salary to cover tax contributions

PROJECT

- If you charge a flat fee for the project, estimate the number of hours for the project and multiply by your hourly rate.
- Plot out all tasks and know how long each will take; factor that in realistically to your fee.

3. Communicate

EDUCATE

- Be able to articulate the value of what you do and what's involved in your work.
- Talk value, not rates: how much time will you save the client? How much easier will you make their work? How will you save or make them money? Quote research when possible.

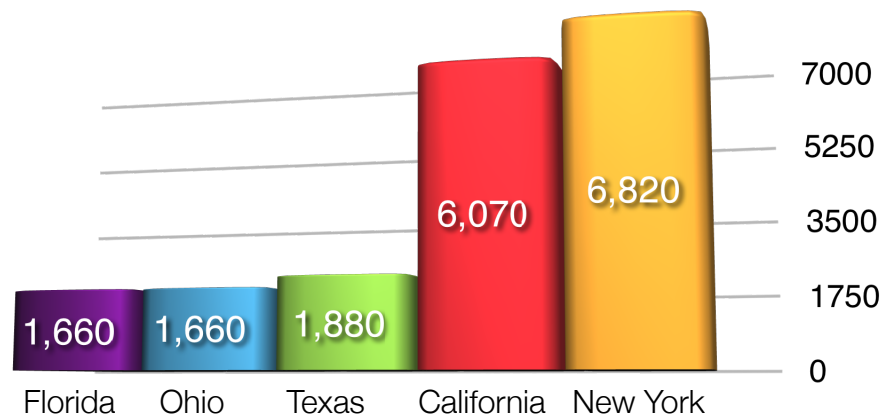

TIPS

- Be able to talk knowledgeably about salaries, retainers, fees, taxes, benefits
- Get a budget proposal from clients beforehand—expect it to be low.
- Consider setting payment terms that charge interest for late payment.

ARTIST REVENUE TRENDS

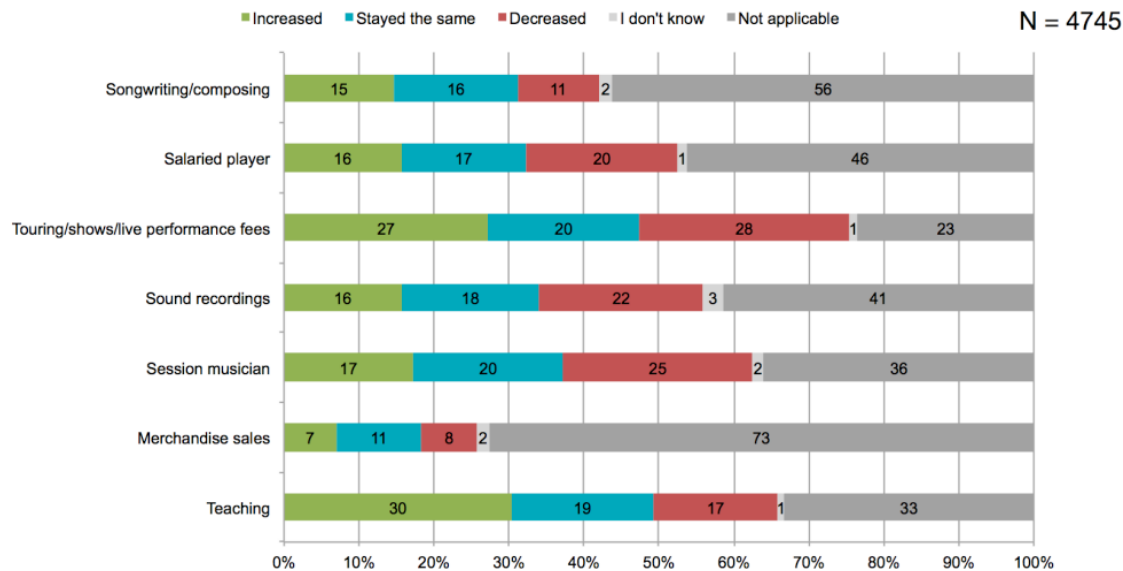

In 2010, Future of Music Coalition launched Artist Revenue Streams – a multi-stage research project to assess whether and how musicians’ revenue streams are changing in this new music landscape. The study appeared in 2012 and is still relevant for its insights in 2016.

For more information please visit the FMC Artist Revenue Streams Project at <http://money.futureofmusic.org>

Quick overview of responses:

- 5,371 musicians and composers completed the survey
- 40 percent said they spend more than 36 hours a week doing music
- 42 percent said they derived all of their personal income from music
- Average personal gross income of survey respondents was $55,561
- The average estimated music income was $34,455
- 80 percent have a college degree or higher
- More than half of respondents are earning money from three roles or more

Revenue changes in past five years: all respondents

The chart shows the survey respondents’ reported changes in gross revenue from 2007 to 2012. The picture is mixed. In almost all these categories, the percent of respondents who said their income was increasing (green bars) are about the same as those who said it was staying the same or decreasing (red bars). The only place where there’s significant change for our survey respondents is more folks seeing an increase in teaching income, and more seeing a decrease in income from session work.
